It's never too early to teach your kids important money-saving skills. Here are some of the best accounts to help them show you the basics of finance. The number of American households without a bank account fell last year to its lowest level since 2009, thanks in part to opening accounts for financial assistance during the pandemic, says a new report. About 4.5 percent of U.S. households, or 5.9 million households, did not have a checking or savings account with a bank or credit union in 2021, a record low, according to the latest survey of unbanked households and not supported by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. About 45% of householdsreceived stimulus payments, unemployment benefits, or other government assistance since the start of the pandemic in March 2020, said the funds helped them open an account, according to a biennial report since 2009. "Reliable and affordable bank accounts provide an opportunity to attract more Americans to the banking system and will continue to play an important role in advancing the economic inclusion of all Americans," Acting FDIC Chairman Martin J. Gruenberg said in a statement. The lack of banking options is preventing some households from receiving federal payments to help the country weather the economic fallout from the COVID-19 health crisis. Fighting Predatory Lending: A Mississippi social justice firm is fighting "predatory lending" in low-income communities. without a bank account: Pandemic checks for "unbanked" Americans were coming in, incentives slow, and with higher fees, no change. The FDIC launched an education camp to encourage more Americans to open accounts and allow these funds to be deposited directly. And banks like Capital One and Ally Financial have eliminated overdraft and other fees that have been a major barrier to accessing the banking system for some Americans. What does it mean to be without a bank account? account in a bank or cooperative cash desk. Since 2009, this percentage of households has almost halved. And since 2011, when 8% of U.S. households had no bank account, the highest since the study began, and the record low was reached in 2021, about half of the decline has been due to what the FDIC says is changing financial position of American households. Who is underfunded? Those who have a checking or savings account but also use financial alternatives such as check cashing services are considered low-income. Last year, 14% of American households, or 18.7 million people, were unbanked. Why don't people have a bank account or too little? Many of those whoNon-banks say they can't afford to open an account because of a lack of funds and overdraft fees when the account balance is low. About 29% cited a lack of fees or minimum balance requirements as the main reason they didn't have a checking or savings account, compared to 38% who cited these barriers in 2019. Households with people were more unbanked, people of working age and people with disabilities, people with lower incomes, single mothers, or people who are black or Hispanic. For example, among white households, 2% had not used a bank in the past year, compared to 11% and 9% of black and Hispanic households, respectively. Meanwhile, nearly 15% of households with a working-age member with a disability did not have a bank account, compared to nearly 4% of other households. And nearly 16% of single mother households did not have a bank account, compared to about 2% of married couples who did not have a bank account. Keith Ernst, the FDIC's associate director of consumer research and examination analysis, said at a news conference on the report. "Maybe." During the last recession, non-bank interest rates actually increased," said Karien Chu, head of banking research at the Center for Financial Research. In addition, households with no head of household in the past year were almost five times more likely to have a head of employment without a bank account , than in households where the head of the household was employed. Experts say: "Incomes are falling ... this has generally been in line with increases in ... Interlinked non-bank interest rates," Chu said.
