The human race has been on a trajectory upward since then "entering 7.7 billion people in 2019 and projected to reach 10 billion by 22nd century. What are the most populated cities in the world to seem are equally shocking. Our population growth has many challenges, according to the United Nations, especially since countries look to hit sustainability goals by 2030. Basically, more humans there are on Earth, more resources such as food, water and land we need , more resources we take away from other species, and the most waste we generate. There are some good news. The population increases are slowing down and in some countries, and elsewhere, some populations are shrinking. However, there are other places that are virtually bursting out to the seams. We look at the 20 most populous metropolitan areas of the planet. MandRitou / ShutterstockCurrent Population: 13,458,075 PeoploAlmost 5,400 people per square kilometer are packed in this urban area on the coast of Brazil. Moreover, with many poor migrants moving to manila from rural areas, increasing manila growth rates are certain to put further strains on resources. The number of 14.3 million is even more incredible when considering that in 1950, the population of this city was a simple population of people. The population of Kinshasa can Huge, but it's nothing to respect the population of the whole world. Ariyo Olasunkanmi / ShutterstockCurrent Population: 14,368,332 Peoplehis Port CityA e a,~ "and the larger city in Africa - originated on the islands of the protected lagoon Lagos, but since then it has expanded about 50 minutes of kilometers inland and now Now About 452 square kilometers.
