Sharing great moments (or only snippets in your life) with friends or dearness has never been so easy, and a new class of live streaming app makes it possible to combine in real time. Of those apps, we think that the periscope is the best today, and has the most potential for the near future. Periscopeplatform: Android (and iOS) Price: Freemoadload PageFeaturesMakesMakes Streaming A simple operation and touch. Streaming streaming in portrait e landscape formatsasalling you to live stream to the public in large, or privately to specific Invitescan Connect to Twitter (which makes sense, since the service is of Twitter property) to share your flow with your friends and followers to be reproduced Through your profile Friends Miss The Live Eventsupports YouTube Auto-Upload, then after the transmission is over, you can save it and share it with a broader audendenenencalows that also follow Twitter contacts also using the app, browse the live flows available For geographical location and see which of your friends is live streaming in any given Timeware from Excelsperiscope has been one of the PR IME APP to really make live streaming events simple and fairly easy for people to do it to do so. Combined with light social aspects that make it fun to find other flows, watches and perhaps even more important, share your flows with friends and load them on YouTube for safe maintenance after your flow is over, it's far from some The oldest live streaming apps that were clunky to use and wanted to be YouTube's competitors instead of living together. This speaks to the largest feature of PERISCOPE - the fact that it died simple to start a flow, share a stream and interact with the people watching. From installation to the flow, it is only a couple of steps, and from there to start a flow it is practically a unique deal. Share it on Twitter and look at the people in which they tune together, leave you messages in real time, they lead you with À € à,~ À "Hearts", and you have a tool that people actually use to share interesting moments in their lives "O ". It is that ease of use and simplicity that have made the perisk the tool of choice for people who want to do fantastic things like sharing games of their children with family members who live throughout the world or protesters who want to convey On a March in a community eager and engaged on social media or live on television. However, it is also the same ease of use that simplifies the current and registering things like the newest episode of Game of Thrones or a boxing game Per view-per-view. Having said that, I saw that it was used by our colleagues in Kotaku to cover E3 from the show floor, and some of my favorites YouTubers to make a laundry live with their fans instead of making them ASP Ettaking an official video "Both large uses of the service.Periscope says he wants to help you" like the world through someone else's eyes, À € à,~ and certainly manage to this. Perhaps in particular, however, except to give us a social tool that brings us all a little closer and is super easy to use at the same time. Where it falls to ShinScope is simple and elegant, but it's not totally perfect. Its integration with Twitter is narrow (which makes sense) but could integrate better with other networks, and save videos and upload them to YouTube later is great, but also other video services would be a nice Perk. Granted, None of this is the break of the game, and to add a lot of bells and whistles could change the balance of the simplicity -The-characteristics that the periscope went to dams. But if any, we would complain that the periscope was portrayed - only, because you know how we all feel the video portraits, but it's no longer a problem Moment that the last update allows you to shoot horizontally. Because today is today, given more than some streams with stained connections and stuttering streams, but it is always difficult to know if the app, the user's connection, the user € à,~ À "€ s Device or the connection. It is also worth noting that the periscope is Android 4.4 and higher, so if you still manage a previous version of Android or on a previous device, you're out of your luck. The competition is the periscope ... À "€ The largest competition, and to be right, it arrived first. While the two were used to be fierce competitors, it's a bit different now. Meerkat has only public, live events, it is more important, heavily heavily heavy than the periscope. The UI is a little more cluttered, and it is certainly less elegant and a little more complicated to use. Starting a stream is a unique deal, but it is a surprise, and there are practically no settings. Registration is a bit easier (only your phone number, a profile photo and a username are all you need,) and you don't have to connect your Twitter account until you want to connect the 'app also with facebook if you prefer. In any case, it is a good option if you are already using it, or if you know the people who use it, but we will certainly prefer the periscope. LiveStream (free) is one of the old guards of live streaming apps. Livestream The web service has been around for centuries, and your mobile apps have always made the streaming of live events from your phone, regardless of the camera you use or how much your community is great. The app has been a long way on post-meerkat and post-poriscope days, and is much easier to use now. Partnership with TV networks and sports leagues also mean that any event that is transmitted in streaming through LiveStream on the Web is an event that you can watch on your phone and you can play the events after they are finished, save your flows to share elsewhere, connect With Facebook, Twitter or Instagram and interact with other flows flows. Again, not so simple or easy as some of the others here, but useful if you are looking for an alternative, or more live events to look. Having (free) is another of the old guard, but it is difficult to recommend. Streaming HD is only available on specific devices, not only only specific versions of Android, and its focus is directly on currently in progress display flows on UStream.com, not necessarily on streaming from the device. You can scroll from your device, obviously not obviously not what the app is really designed for. If you have a favorite flow in UStream, though (like this live HD view from the international space station) and you want to check it on your phone or tablet À € à,~ "or if you are streaming and you want to see how you look at another device, then it's worth the penalty ~ "myself to my friends and chat with them, À € à,~ if it makes sense. Where Periscope and Meerkat feel a little more mature, you can use a significant part of the screen for live chat and recommended transmissions, depending on whether you are streaming or surveillance (respectively) to keep users engaged. The service has a dots and in-app currency system that you press points for certain activities that you use to then À € à,~ à "Level up, À € à,~ and in-app À € à,~ À "€ coincies € à,~ À € à,~ À "Bars" which can be used to buy gifts for your profile or your favorite streamer, some of which cost real money. It seems that you are so fun as a community if it is the type of incoming environment (and having money to launch it), but the reviews on Google Play Aren "T too encouraging as the function of the app is interested. These are the great players. There are some others, like Twiscating Live (free) and Stre.am (free), both who are promising, wise and seem to work quite well, but they are both players Small with smaller communities and userbase. This does not mean that you should not control them, but it means that if you are looking for the community, or for people to register and look at your flow or interact with you, you may be better better Something a little bigger. Twiscating walks the line between periscope and find them, allowing you to invite other people in your stream, but his UI is a super bulky and looks a little too difficult to focus the chat. Stre.am on the other hand is light and elegant, just empty. The empty app directory.
