Oh, my goodness! Pass @ I can't tell you how many times I thought maybe I'd bitten off more than I could chew! After researching different websites about how to make this master costume, the one thing I knew was that it needed to be made of eva foam. What is it? @ an eva foam? Ethylene-vinyl acetate and only happens to the anti-fatigue floors are done with this. Walmart's anti-fatigue mats had four packs of anti-fatigue mats. That's what they look like. One side has texture. Looking for patterns for the master costume, I checked several sites. Most were talking about pepakura and how you could get the patterns on different sites. Well, I printed out a pattern for the chest plate. Many pieces! Oh, my God! Oh! Hurts my dog. @ Brains! I asked ten years old Aidan to draw a picture of what he wanted and this is @ the photo. Aidan is drawing Master Chief Costume Master Inspiration Inspiration with this in mind, I found a picture of the master chief, who Aidan had stuck on his clipboard, printed it, and drew a free hand pattern. It was much easier! When Aidan approached, I adjusted the paper pattern to detail the chest plate, adding some length to the part that fits on the shoulders. Then I drew the pattern on the carpet. Tracking and cutting pattern. Watching some YouTube videos on how to cut this foam, I found those who claim to use a heat knife, those who say to use an X-Acto knife, and those who suggest a scissors. Using an old wood burning tool we have, equipped with a knife blade blade blade blade blade, I tried this hand @ whole. Maybe this isn't hot enough. The results were less than spectacular. There wasn't an arrow in this photo of the master chief. I saw it in another photo and took the liberty of adding it for more interest. The X-ACTO knife worked better, but the edges looked a little The scissors seemed to work better. Any area where it was used the scissors. In the corners and for the small indentations, an X-Acto knife was used. The scissors too @ m have been used to trim the edges as much as possible. Cut the details. The arrow has to be raised. It may seem counter-intuitive, but first, it needs to be cut and removed. (We are an Affiliate from Amazon and can receive a small percentage of any sales from this link at no cost to you. Thank you for supporting this site!) The glue I bought for this project @ LocTite All Purpose Go 2 Glue. This is @ A more recent glue on the LocTite line. Reading the package, it seemed to be exactly what it is @ Needed for this project. Apply glue to the edges, partially inset, leaving a portion above the surface A fine line of glue @ applied to the bottom half of all the edges of the piece, which @ removed. The piece @ So reinserted in the opening and left partially extending above the surface. This glue gives you a little more drying time than superglue. The other two pieces of detail are cut, removed and glued back in place, extending above the surface as well. @ m. After the glue @ dry, the heat knife is @ used to draw lines. One leg @ small metal water @ used as a guide to mining. This needs to be done slow and stable so you do not accidentally slide to the plate and sea the surface of the breast plate detail! Use a heat knife for details lines Try-On The Chest Plate at this point, I showed this to Aidan and made sure it fit properly. Let's just say he wasn't very impressed. Uncontainable, I dove in, and using the foam cut as a guide, made a paper pattern for the chest. That too. @ m has been adjusted and adjusted for Aidan. So, this pattern was used to cut off a piece of the foam. In fact, this piece had to be cut with two pieces of foam. I made sure the front half went over the shoulder and there would be no stress on a seam there. We use the side From the carpet to this piece. Form the chest plate with a heat pistol And "forming with the heat gun" you can see in the picture where the seam is glued. It's Joshua 160; chewing tape @ used along the inside seam to keep the two pieces together while the glue dried. A big heavy book @ put on the seam to keep it in place, too @ m. After the sewing @ glued safely and dry, the heat weapon is @ used to shape and shape the edges to contort around the torso. It's Joshua 160; This post in the 405th, with explains how to mold the foam and works very well. Look at that! You can see how the left edge is @ flat and like the right edge now curves to fit a body! It's Joshua 160; Aidan tried again this time and still didn't seem impressed. Most of the poles for this suit say to use spray paint. That means mask the areas, take it out, spray, turn, spray again. Well, no thanks. The time constraints I have now make me consider alternatives. On a piece of foam, I painted a patch of bright blue acrylic ink. I let it dry, I let it dry. It's Joshua 160! I folded. The heat weapon was used on her. There's no problem! Why not use cheap acrylic paint? The acrylic handcraft painting bought a Master Chief helmet before we started this project. It's Rayna160; I compared a marker to the color of the helmet, took it to the craft store, and found a perfect match, American DecoArt Acrylic Paint checker. (We are an Affiliate Amazon and can receive a small percentage of any sales from this link at no cost to you. I bought two bottles from the light avocado. A bottle of clever handicrafts Metabolized Acrylic Paint Medium Metallic in Silver as well @ m was bought at the same time. You will notice that the helmet has brushed silver paint on its seats. It's Joshua 160; It's Joshua 160; A little more detail was cut from the regular foam craft. It's Joshua 160; I found a 12th. LOUCO LOUCO LOUCO LOUCO LOUCO WITH NETIES FOR 99 cents. Personally, I like the gray behind theAAAAAAA Amara AIX160, green, but Aidan wants this black part. A MELHORA160; Using acrylic craft paint again, theBlack painted @ plate. Then, the localized glue was applied on the back of the detail of the green chest plate, up to @ the shoulders, and leaving the curved edge around the sides of the waist loose. It is positioned on top of the black painted piece, placed down, and the books are placed on top of it to keep it compressed together while the glue dries. The curved green waist sides are then glued, one at a time and heavy books placed on them in the same way, and the glue is @ left to dry Both shoulders are glued in the same way. The head/waist master/waist one pattern was designed for the waist belt, using the main main image as a guide. From the middle part - it was raised in the photo, a separate piece of thick foam was Cut. Then the tip would bend more easily, @ punctuated on the back with the knife heated to about 1' above the tip. So the heat gun is @ to make that part fold back like that of Aidan's pinterest board photo. The details are drawn on the belt with a pen and then the heat knife is @ to make those more apparent. Master Chief Bel is @ ahead. The pattern back was made after the same pattern just drawing less than one curve at the bottom. The plane @ add velcro on the sides to finish the belt. At this point, I sent a picture of the costume to Aidan's father to show it. He mentioned to me back that Aidan said it @ cool! He's like to see the possibilities!
