It's that assertiveness that makes it sound good in this autumn-themed cocktail, where it combines with lemon, maple syrup and fresh pear. Modern English comes from Michael Waterhouse, a long-time barman and bar consultant in New York City. The drink has a unique approach to its construction. A gin sour like a pear flavored Gimlet is not unheard of, but generally it means freshly squeezed lemon juice, simple syrup and some kind of pear liqueur or pear syrup. Instead, Waterhouse uses lemon slices, maple syrup and a slice of pear, all mixed with Bulldog gin. Thanks to global markets and imported goods, you can make this drink at any time of the year. However, the best season is between the end of summer and the beginning of autumn, when the local pears are at their peak season. The fun thing about using fresh pear rather than a liqueur or even a syrup is that you can play with the favorites to see which go best in the drink. Try mixing, using something like an Anjou, Bartlett or Bosc and see what suits your imagination best. Similarly, feel free to exchange the Bulldog Bulldog for something that works best for you, or any gin you have at hand. Something lighter and floral like Hendrickâ ªs or something subtler like Plymouth will make a final product dramatically different from Bulldog. While a cinnamon stick is called for a seal, it will not affect too much the taste of the drink unless you leave it in the glass for a long time. Feel free to omit it if you wish. 1/4 fresh pear, peeled, seeded and cubed 2 lemon cloves 1/2 ounces maple syrup 2 1/2 ounces Bulldog gin Gasket: cinnamon stick (optional) In a shaker, mix all ingredients except gin. Add the gin and fill with ice, and shake until well cooled. Double strain in a coupe glass. Garnish with a cinnamon stick. Vote for this recipe I don't like at all. That's not the worst. Sure, that's fine. I'm a fan, I'd recommend you. Unbelievable! I like it so much! Thank you for your assessment! assessment!
